“Bread Ovens in Syria”

by Dr. Noor Mulder-Hymans, archaeologist and art historian, teacher of Art History and Archaeology at Maastricht University and HOVO, and since 1999 involved as a senior staff member in the Canadian Wilfrid Laurier University’s Wadi ath-Thamad excavation project at Khirbat al-Mudayana in Jordan, at

Sunday the 30th of September, 2007, 20:00h at NIASD

Syria is a land of traditions, one of these is baking bread in different types of ovens, for example the Tannur along the Euphrates river, the Tabun in the druze area and the Saj at the bedouins

During her excavations in the Near East she discovered that most breadovens were badly preserved. She decided to do research in different areas in Syria to learn about the making of bread ovens and about baking bread and to use this information for her excavated ovens. In this lecture at the NIASD, she will present some of her research results along with pictures.
